A White Christmas

The United Church Sunday School is giving their White Christmas program on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, Dec. 20, in the school auditorium.

A miscellaneous program is being arranged, each class contributing a special number.

All who attend are requested to bring gifts of new or re-conditioned toys or clothing or food wrapped in white paper. The gifts received will be distributed by a responsible committee who are in touch with our communities' needs, to those less fortunate. This is the true spirit of a White Christmas and it is believed it will be appreciated.

Wedding Bells

Edwards—Watt

An interesting wedding to everyone in the Vulcan district was solemnized on Saturday, Dec. 3, at 2 o'clock p.m. when William, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Watt was united in marriage to Maurice Edwards, of Shoultice, at the United Church house. Rev. J. N. Branton officiated.

The bride wore a charming gown of crepe, trimmed with peach chiffon-velvet, with matching accessories. Miss Beulah Walker acted as bridesmaid.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, with only intimate friends and relatives present. The table was centered with a large three-tier wedding cake, made and beautifully decorated by the bride's mother. After such merry-making the happy couple left for Calgary and northern points where they will spend a few weeks on a honeymoon trip.

The bride's travelling costume was a sea-kin coat with fur, gloves, shoes and purse to match.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Edwards will reside at Shoultice.

The bride has been a resident of Vulcan for many years, with her parents and has been an active church worker.

Prior to her wedding she was the recipient of many beautiful gifts from friends far and near—Vulcan Advocate.

Many Women Take Homesteads

Almost one-third of the homesteads taken up since July 2nd, 1931, in Alberta, under the new provincial government regulations have been secured by women. When Alberta took over its own lands, the regulations covering homestead rights were changed to provide for a three years' residence in the province before entry for homesteads could be made, and also to permit women, whether married, single, or widows, to take up land. As a result the number taken by the women since then has been 2,392, compared with 6,012 taken by men.

Mrs. P. J. Chernoff, Bismarck, B.C., writes: "I had been so troubled with shortness of breath I could not lie down to sleep. I couldn't do any hard work, or climb the stairs, and had nervous and smothering feelings, and became very weak. I tried all kinds of medicine, but could get no relief until after I had taken three boxes of Miller's Heart and Nerve Pills, and since then I have felt better in every way."

Now -- All Together.

Municipal and school board elections are over for another year throughout Canada's western provinces. Reports indicate that, generally speaking, the elections this year were contested with a vigor surpassing that which usually characterizes such contests. This, no doubt, is but another result of the difficult and critical times in which we live, and of the inevitable outcome of which is discontent, dissatisfaction with whatever is done, no matter what its nature may be, or who may be responsible for the doing of it. Another factor accounting for the keenness of many contests was the entry of a political party in Provincial and Federal elections, and the realm of municipal affairs, thus introducing a new element, and in some cases a new bitterness, into municipal and school board elections.

It is no doubt true that at no time can men and women, clothed with responsibility by their fellow citizens to direct public policies and manage public affairs, please all classes. No matter what they may do, or may leave undone, certain people will be dissatisfied. This, however, is especially true at a time like the present when all governing bodies are confronted with the two-fold task on one hand of maintaining the peace and order, and of being faced with the necessity of making extraordinary expenditures on the other hand. Both these things must be done—the first because of failing resources resulting from the inability of many people to pay taxes, and the second because prevailing conditions still leave in hand the need for relief for countless numbers of people. The result is a demand for more and more so-called "free" services on the part of governments, for people who have not the means to obtain these services for themselves, at a time when governments cannot possibly get the money to pay for the additional "free" services.

Dissatisfaction and discontent, ending in unreasonableness on the part of the citizen, is the inevitable result. These things which many people are demanding, if granted, mean the imposition of still heavier burdens on those who are making a valiant struggle to keep their own heads above water and not become charges on the community. Those whom the citizenship made responsible for the administration of public policies and affairs thus found themselves between two fires, and, with their hands tied financially, making it impossible for them to do many of the things they undoubtedly would have been glad to do were it only possible.

Some experienced and conscientious public servants have, as a result of this general dissatisfaction, been defeated, their places on public bodies being taken by others, some of whom, again, have captured the popular fancy and support as a result of more or less sweeping promises which they will soon discover they too, with all the best intention in the world, will be unable to fulfill.

Service on municipal councils, school boards, and other public bodies is, at best and under the most favorable circumstances, a more or less thankless task, while under present prevailing adverse conditions it is even more so, inviting, as it does, little but abuse, misrepresentation of motives and acts, and loss of whatever popularity a person may have possessed. Such service also involves no small sacrifice on the part of the person accepting public office. In these days it requires every moment of one's time and energies to keep their own personal business matters in solvent shape, neglect of them means disaster.

But service on public bodies is a public duty and it is a duty that must be discharged by some one, and those who are willing to make the sacrifice are deserving of the thanks and cordial goodwill of their fellow citizens, regardless of the fact that their every act may not meet with approval.

Therefore, none of the smoke of our municipal and school board battles has floated away, now that the decisions of the majority have been rendered, it behooves all citizens of good will, and loyal to the democratic institutions of this country, to get behind their representatives whoever they may be, and, irrespective of the fact whether they were their personal choice or not, give them a helping hand. Let carping criticism now cease. Let all personalities be forgotten. Rather, let one and all stand unitedly in support of their elected representatives and work harmoniously together with one single purpose of doing the best possible under existing circumstances, helping each other, and thereby helping all.

And in so doing greater consideration may well be given to this important fact which too many people are rather inclined in these troublous days to forget, namely, that more can be learned from the experiences of the past than from all the best books of theories or the idealistic visions of inexperienced and untried visionaries. What is good in the past we should retain, while that which, through experience, we have learned to be weak and faulty should be remedied or discarded, being substituted by what that same experience has shown to be needed, rather than to invoke some purely theoretical idea which, when put to the test of practical operation, is more likely than not to land us in a deeper morass than the one from which we are striving to extricate ourselves.

Woman Is Honored By French Legion

Old Tradition Has Been Shattered
For Second Time
An old tradition which dates back to Napoleon and which kept French Legionnaires from giving the rank of Officer of Honor has been shattered by the award of the rank of Commandeur of the Legion to a woman, for the second time in history.

Mme. Philippe de Villemor, millionaire business woman and one of the world's greatest dealers in seeds and grains, has been promoted from Officier to Commandeur, joining in that rank Countess de Noailles, poetess, the only other woman Commander in the Legion's history.

The promotion came in the distribution of 600 ribbons and rosettes of the Legion of Honor to reward services rendered towards the success of the Colonial Exposition, Madame de Villemor had created the moral decoration of the exposition grounds.

Withdrew during the war, Mme. de Villemor left the front, where she and her husband were, and she had, with her, a war nurse, and took charge of the 200-year-old grain firm.

She travelled through Africa, Indo-China, Java, Egypt, Australia, and the Orient, to select and improve the seeds of tobacco, rice, coffee, peanuts, and other colonial crops. She operates agronomic laboratories, and, largely, was responsible for saving the French cut-flower industry from ruinous Dutch-American competition.

Reproduction Of Old Temple

Took Centuries To Build But Duplicate Took Sixty Days

The Chicago World's Fair breaks ground for the great Maya temple that is to be a dominating feature. It reproduces the temple at Uxmal Yucatan, built more than 1,000 years ago by the ancient Maya, the great progenies of North America. The original was generations in building, the duplicate goes up in 60 days. With electric lighting and the grotesque beauty of a Mayan god can be turned out in a few hours; but the original Maya, who did not even know how to dig, in copper spent a lifetime in bringing a face or a column into form. This temple alone will serve all the gods of a world's fair—it will be a palm of the rise of man—Christian Science Monitor.

An excellent protection against worms can be got in Miller's Worm Powder. They render the stomach and intestines uninviting to them. They treat the surfer that have become inflamed by the attack of the parasites and serve to restore the strength of the child that has been undermined by the danger that the worms have made upon it, and their operation is altogether health-giving.

Grain Storage Rates

Charge For Grain Storage Has Now Been Reduced

The rate of charge for grain storage, elevator and other services at the country and terminal elevators, has been fixed by the government at one-fifth of a cent per bushel per day, a decrease from the former rate of one-tenth of a cent at present in force. The change is made by virtue of the recent amendment to the Canada Grain Act, which places the power to take such action in the hands of the Board of Grain Commissioners. The amendment passed the House during the recently adjourned session, after a brief debate. It was sponsored by Hon. H. M. Stevens, Minister of Trade and Commerce.

Plan Is Hardly Feasible

The National Railway Construction Federation has submitted a plan to the Ministry of Railways to connect the ancient Great Wall of China into a system of motor highways, but it is hard for outsiders to conjecture such a motor road. For hundreds of miles the Wall climbs over mountain peaks.

Shanghai Has German Paper

City Now Boasts Wide Variety In Daily Newspapers

Into the babel of Shanghai's already complex newspaper world still another foreign language daily has made its debut. It is the German language, Deutsches Shanghai, Zeeberg. Perhaps no other city in the world boasts so many different kinds of daily papers.

Published in the English language there is the old established English journal, the North China Daily News, so-called because at its founding most foreigners lived in Canton, to which Shanghai was then North China, although it is far from that geographically; speaking. Two American dailies, the Chin Press and the morning and the Shanghai Evening Post and Mercury, an afternoon paper, vie with the third, the Shanghai Times, which has an English editor, although it is not of that nationality as to capital.

No Place For Candy Shop

New Orleans Woman Would Open Store In Alaska

In New Orleans, La., a certain woman is thirsting for knowledge of Canada's far north. She also seeks knowledge of the Dominion's currency. The woman, whose name was not revealed, wrote a tourist agency at Calgary for the information that she apparently wanted to open a store in Alaska, which rests in Canada's bleak sub-Arctic.

The agency, however, told her there were not railways to the shore coast of the Arctic ocean and that it would be doubtful if the candy and medicine business would be very profitable in that district. They also told her Canadian money was in dollars and cents not pounds and shillings as she believed.

Many Methods Used

Almost every known method of surveying has been made use of in the work of surveying the international boundary between Canada and the United States. In its length of 5,500 miles, the boundary passes through country greatly varying in nature—through arms of the sea, through the great lakes, through swamps and bogs, through open prairie, snowfields, glaciers and mountains.

Legend Of Bruce

Famous Bruce's Stone Is Presented To Scottish Nation

The Earl of Mar has presented to the Scottish nation Bruce's stone. Everybody has heard the legend of Bruce and the spider. Less familiar, though, is the story of the stratagem to which Bruce resorted, or he did on so many other occasions with equal success, when he was a fugitive in the Galloway Highlands. His little band of followers gathered about horses, wild and tame, all the goats, all the four-footed creatures upon which they could lay hands, the noise of this large body and the waving of the goats' horns made the English apprehensive that there must be a result of the world war, and accordingly they remained in their camp, and at daybreak Bruce attacked them with such fury that they were utterly routed.

Moss Raploch, where the stone is set up, and under which Bruce rested after he had put the camp to flight, was recently sold by the Earl of Mar to the Galloway Power Company, but the Earl reserved from the sale the stone itself, together with a means of access from the main road.

Bidding For Foreign Markets

Germany Plans To Send Out Floating Industrial "Fair"

In an endeavour to regain some of the foreign markets Germany lost as a result of the world war, an association of German manufacturers of Hagen, Westphalia, plan to send out a floating industrial "fair" every next year, on a trade crusade to South America and the Far East, according to commerce department advisers from Consul J. H. Hirsche at Nantes. The 14,000-ton Hamburg-South American liner S.S. Cap Noronha has been chartered for the "fair." It will visit more than 70 foreign ports of the world, leaving Hamburg or Bremen shortly after the first of the year and remaining away 18 months. "It will sail first to South American ports, later visiting British East India, China and Japan," the consul's report said.

The "Floating Fair" has been so organized that even small firms may take part in this piece of practical trade promotion. It will offer for sale and will exhibit a great range of German industrial products, especially hardware and tools.

Nation-Wide Fame.—There is scarcely a corner of this great Dominion where the merits of Dr. Thomas' Electric Balm have not been tried and proved. It is one of the most efficient remedies for sore throat, lame back and many other ailments arising from inflammation. Rubbed on the skin its healing powers are readily absorbed, and it can also be taken internally.

Parisian Detective Sues Tax Company For Injury To His Nose

Detectives must have two good noses—one for crime and another on the face. That is why a magistrate in Paris has awarded $1,000 damages to a sleuth attached to the police squad for the suppression of gambling. The detective had sued a tax company because his nose had been injured in a taxi accident and he could no longer carry on his work at race tracks because "he would immediately be recognized on account of his injured nose."

She said, "You know what I want to talk about." She asked pointedly. "When your term is up next month, are you going to re-enlist or not?"

Alan knew that Elizabeth was determined, heart and soul, that he should get out of the Mounted and take a good salaried position down in Victoria, which Colonel Steele, commander of his regiment in the World War, had been wanting him to accept. But he was loath to take a job on a friendship basis, he preferred to stand on the more self-respecting ground of honest work honestly performed. And to leave this land where he had found freedom and happiness was an intolerable prospect. He loved this northern Mackenzie country as intensely as he hated the hectic stifling oppression of city life; and his comradeship with men like Bill Hardstock was precious to him.

If he tore himself away from all this, if he became a mere cog in an industrial machine, he would be uprooted and miserably unhappy.

But as things stood, he was in a bind. Alan was riding him hard for personal reasons; and yet justice had been done him. . . . There were a dozen dead, powerful arguments on the other side, too.

After a moment he said slowly: "I suppose I ought to sign on again. But it's hard to decide, Elizabeth."

"What is there to decide about?" How can you tolerate this situation, you're in? You're a subordinate, taking orders; you're liable to be demoted any day; you're compelled to do another man's work for him? You don't think your situation is going to change? You aren't expecting a commission any more now, is that right? When you're under heaven do you want to stay?"

Alan started to answer, but he checked the words. His reasons were deep and intangible things—his friendships, the freedom he'd found here, the sense of being rooted in the country, his rambling duties that held him with invisible bonds, his unwillingness to desert comrades when they justly needed him, his reluctance to give the impression of having quit solely because a commission was not forthcoming.

Down on the river bank Bill Hardstock came skimming full-tilt up to the landing, swerved the canoe around in a complete circle to stop it, leaped out upon the plank, tossed the painter to a sleepy Loucheux. He did not seem to notice Louchoux. He pulled only a couple rods away. At a hop he headed up the terrace, straight for Alan's cabin, as though Alan was the man to hear his news.

"If you had noticed to turn to," Elizabeth protested, "it would be a little different. But you've got a position waiting at four times your present salary, with advancement sure, with a chance to make even more on the side." She broke off. "But what's the use going over and over these arguments? We've gone over them a dozen times. I didn't come for that."

She paused a second to emphasize her next words. "If you intend to stay in the Mounted, I wish you could tell me so frankly, so that I can plan my life accordingly."

It was an ultimatum. She meant it so; Alan understood it so. But she saw too that it had antagonized him a little. Though she must be firm now, she must heed of his antagonism.

Dropping her coldness, she got up and stood beside him where he sat on the corner of the table.

"Alan! Don't you realize how intolerable it is for me—not being with you two hours in a whole week? And if we were married, he—Haskell—would make it even worse. You know he's sending you out on these patrols and letting you be here just long enough to manage the post. When you're gone he forces his company on me. If I'd repulse him, he'd—he'd take it out on you! I've got to let him do it!"

A slow red crept into Alan's face and his fist clenched. He had wondered, sometimes with nameless suspicions, why she allowed Haskell to be so much in her company. Mrs. Drummond and others had hinted about it to him, implying it was not very honest of her. Here was the reason! It had never occurred to him that Elizabeth had been permitting it for his sake.

He thought: "I can't blame her for not wanting to live here in the North. Her brother died here; he hasn't any friends; these folks don't understand her. If she wants to live in a city, that's as natural, as much her right, as my wanting to live in the North. I'll leave her to have pleasures, clothes, and other things like when I take that Victoria job. Wouldn't any girl want them?"

RUNS UPSTAIRS AT 92

Daughter's Pride in Active Father

"I feel in duty bound," writes Mrs. A. J. W., "to express my gratitude for the marvelous results my father has obtained from Kruschen salts. They should really be called 'miracles.' He is eighty-two years old, and is as fit as a fiddle. He can nip, and run up and down stairs, and his friends marvel why it is he is always alert, and never feels old. He always tells me the reason, 'my regular daily dose of Kruschen salts every morning.' We always recommend Kruschen salts to all our friends. To my idea no family should be without it."

(Mrs. A. J. W.) Most people grow old long before their time because they neglect one vital need of health—the need for internal cleanliness. Eventually they start getting rid of every day of all waste matter from the system. Now, healthy blood goes coursing through the veins. And almost instantly they feel their youth has returned. They feel young, energetic and happy. In a word, they've got that famous "Kruschen Feeling."

... A rifle bullet. . . . He was the only one who drew a gun—"But he could not speak, he could only stare at Bill."

"And if Father Claverly hadn't stepped in and helped stop a rush, Alan, they have shot up the whole deck. They slung the dust and furs into their canoes, and . . . Did they get away? What brought beating up the river? I hope they did—clean, slicker than a whistle!"

In the plans then, Alan fought to shake his fist. He had to make the plan, fling out a patrol, get into action. It was all in his hands—the pursuit, the capture, the whole heavy responsibility.

He demanded: "Who were they? Trappers, did you say?"

"Oh, I know who Alan, But strangers. Five whites and one 'breed.'"

"Strangers? Can't be! Not in this country."

"But that's what they were. Nobody on the boat had ever seen a single one of 'em."

Alan did not believe this, but for the moment he passed it up. "Which way did they go? Have motors on their canoes?"

"No. Paddle craft. They whipped up the Big Alouka."

For a little space Alan stood thinking. Why those bandits started their robbery there at the mouth of the Alouka, instead of farther down north, at some lonely reach along the Mackenzie? In an instant he saw the answer to this question. They had chosen with an eye to a quick escape, an escape to the best hiding place in all Mackenzie territory.

As he imagined, whipping up the Big Alouka, he whirled up that lonely spruce-buried river past Mackenzie's trading post, his thoughts leaped to Joyce, and a fear came into his eyes.

Echoing this very fear, Bill said: "They'll have to pass the same place, Alan. You chances to one, Dave's gone out somewhere after spring gunning and Joyce is there all by herself."

"That maybe they won't stop," Alan argued. His words were more a prayer for Joyce. "They'll probably try to make a pass."

"Bill, go down to barracks, find Fed, tell him to get the launch in shape to travel. While you're doing that, I'll go tell Haskell."

Halfway down the slope Alan heard upon Constable Larry Young, who was spreading Haskell's bed clothing on the grassy terrace to sun.

An older man, past forty, a native of this Watervay country, Larry had spent his boyhood years living with Cree and half-breed hunters, and by odds he was the best bush detective in the whole division. But in matters of discipline and warfare he was a novice. For he was older, more set in his ways, more resentful of personal affront. Months ago Haskell had begun him from a corporal and by humiliating him with orderly duty, he had been trying to make Larry knock under. Waiting for another man's pay so he could try out at the Mounted, Larry was going about his "quavering" with stoical face, chafing up his personal score against the day when he would be out of service and could settle with Haskell in man-to-man fashion.

Alan bade him: "Larry, drop that. Go and help him out. He'll tell you what's up."

It was rare that Constable Haskell allowed Alan to help him. If they were ordinary trappers they got a clear drop on the crowd, and had the run of the boat for better half an hour!

Alan leaped to the all-important question. "They didn't escape, Bill? They didn't get by with a truck like that?"

Scarcely hearing him, Bill kept pouring out his news. "They took more than three hundred pounds of dust, and sorted out half a dozen packs of the best and lightest furs. Alan, they shot and killed Jimmy Montgomery! He was the only one that drew a gun against 'em, and a rifle got him cold!"

Alan's face went pale. The news of the robbery had been dealing enough in him, but now, this cruel shock of Jimmy's death. . . . His lips fashed silently. "They killed Jimmy."

clerkish recruit when he had brought along to Rostand, had repeated several infuriating jokes about him which the men were tossing back and forth in barracks. A few minutes ago Bill Hardstock, plainly carrying important news, had brushed past him as though he had not existed, and had taken the news straight to Alan Baker. And just now through the open door he had seen Baker order Larry Young to drop work assigned by a superior officer and do something else. (To Be Continued.)

Name Was Changed

Reason Why Chinese Thought Chop Suey Was American Dish

At last, be it known, after all these years of argument, chop suey, the only "dish" without a country, has been given a home.

Despite all propaganda to the contrary, it is a Chinese food.

Not only that, but it was a common dish in households of the Orient centuries before Columbus, who never heard of spaghetti, discovered America, before saurkraut was labelled German, before the hot tamale was synonymous with Mexico and before Boston became "bean-town."

Years ago, when chop suey suddenly sprang from out of nowhere and became a favorite dish in restaurants of the United States, it was labelled a Chinese dish, but the Orientals repudiated it and claimed it was an American concoction.

But, take it from Stephen C. Hong, authority on Chinese culinary arts, the reason it was scorned by the Chinese was because it was travelling under a "non de plume" and didn't recognize the name. The real name of chop suey is naga choy naga. Of course, it is hard to pronounce. It means in Chinese, however, merely vegetables and meat, according to Hong.

THE RHYMING
OPTIMIST

WHEN YOU DRAW NEAR

How shall I know when you draw near,
Though far and long you rove?
How will my heart be sure to hear
Your footfall, Love?

How is the Earth aware of spring
And south winds sweet and warm?
How does it close its reckoning
With wintry storm?

So timid is the spring's soft tread,
So strong the winter's might!
How dare the violet lift its head
Through chill soil's night?

Your step is one among the throng
That through my life must go.
How will it stir my soul to song,
How make joys grow?

O Sweet, a miracle is here
That none can read aright;
Yet is certain, and as clear
As dawning's light!

For as the cold Earth throbs with spring
As robin creaks, clear,
So will my pulse leap and sing
When you draw near!

Newspaper Man Soon Becomes Reconciled To Four Facts

An editorial in a California paper says that after 15 years in the business a newspaper man becomes reconciled to the following facts (1) He will always be regarded as some sort of freak; (2) that the favors he does will usually go unnoticed, but his mistakes never; (3) that when he gets in a crowd someone will say jealously "Don't talk in front of So-and-so, he'll put in in the paper"; (4) that once a week someone will remark that newspaper work must be fascinating.

Modern Thief Versatile

No Longer Confines Himself To Money Or Jewels

Money, jewelry, plate—these were the booty of the old-fashioned thief. Sikes. According to the latest statistics of crime, all that is changed, and there's hardly anything from a motor truck downwards, that is safe from the modern thief. Today, gangs specialize in cigarette stealing in England. In one recent case 200,000 cigarettes were lifted from one warehouse.

A queer case was that of a tobacco-smoke shop where a thief broke in and stole all the coupons out of 418 packets but left the cigarettes behind.

Market gardeners complain of being robbed of growing plants. In the Orpington district of Kent, Eng., a rose-grower found one morning that all his best roses, including over 100 golden emblem bushes, had been dug up and taken away.

In Durham the police discovered a robber's cache in a huddle, where an unusual selection of stolen goods was stored. These were hundreds of electric pocket lamps, candles, leather bags, surveying instruments, notebooks and pencils.

Nowadays the only shops that seem to escape the attention of thieves are those in which provisions are sold, and even these are not immune, for only the other day a sweet shop in London was raided—Pearson's Weekly.

UNION NOTES

Who Owns the Farm?

by Ted Bullock
in the Sherbrooke Record

President Edward Westworth, leader of the C.P.R., has his finger squarely on the weakest point in all socialistic theory. He has declared that the shareholders, that is the owners of the C.P.R., cannot and will not surrender control of their property to any tribunal.

And, of course, he is dead right. The Duff Commission scheme to force both Canadian railway systems to accept what amounts virtually to the dictation of a court when you stop to consider it, just a move to confiscate private property.

It may not have been intended to be that. But that is what it is.

Socialism, the old-kind-of socialism that was responsible for nationalization of hydro power in Ontario, is an anomaly.

It proclaims that all property which exists to serve the public ought never to belong to private individuals. Yet it is willing to concede to the individual ownership of that property which he uses himself.

If you will sit down quietly in a corner somewhere and try to draw the line between property which under theory, ought to be public and property which ought to be private, you will generate a first-class headache for yourself. And that is all you will get.

Let us assume, for purposes of argument, that I am a farmer. I own and operate two hundred acres, which I have cleared myself, seeded myself, and brought into production. I have built a barn and a house for myself, and have raised my own herd of cattle from humble beginnings.

Now suppose that some labourer who has held a job for years and has drawn his reward in cash finds himself suddenly in a hole. A depression is on. He is out of work. He cannot be allowed to starve.

He comes to me for help. If he asks for work, or for a bed and food for as long as his hard luck lasts, I'll give them to him if I can.

But if he comes along and says: "Your farm does not belong to you, it raises foodstuffs, and food belongs to the whole human race. Therefore your farm is public property, and I am going to take half of it."—he comes along with a song and dance like that I am quite likely to smother him on the spot.

He has had the reward of his work in cash, and he has spent it. He has his property and he chuckles at every word.

Well, it seems to me it is the same with the C.P.R. Just because one company is big and another is small, just because one owner is a joint stock company and the other is an individual, you cannot fairly treat the two differently.

How can a man be justified in "shooting for the confiscation of the C.P.R. unless he advocates at the same time that every taxicab ought to be nationalized, every streetcar owned by the government and given over to a government bureau to be run?

When the fairness in allowing the little chap to keep his property and forcing the bigger chap to give his away?

People who go in for that kind of political thinking are the type who would try to play baseball according to football rules.

I can see no logical middle road between capitalism and communism. Our whole concept of life rests on the fact that what belongs to a man is his. If we start fiddling with that concept, we must go to the other sensible position and declare that anything which belongs to anybody belongs to everybody.

Oh, I know the socialist will tell you my point of view is archaic and narrow-minded, "he will say it is inhuman and cruel. But is his any better?

CANADIAN PACIFIC

If the Canadian government is allowed to tell the owners of the C.P.R. how they must run their property, what on earth is to prevent that same government from ordering me to write this column to the taste of Alfred Bennett, and from dictating to farmers just what crops they shall raise each year, and where they shall sell them?

It is all a part of the same economic theories. But when you start trying to fit one of them into common sense, you realize pretty quickly that there is a dark cloud over every silver lining.

Endurance of Ford V-8 Demonstrated

The unusual endurance of the Ford V-8 car was strikingly demonstrated in a 30-day reliability run which has just been completed over 27,228 miles of Minnesota and Wisconsin roads according to Mr. Larsen, of the Larsen Implements, local Ford Dealers.

"The performance run," said Mr. Larsen "was routed over two highway loops centering in Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minnesota, one winding through western Wisconsin, the other through western Minnesota. The daily runs averaged nearly 910 miles. During the last 6,300 miles, the gears were locked in "high," but despite this the car negotiated without accident not only the steep hills in the vicinity of Duluth but also the problems of city traffic and gravel and poor clay roads."

"The average speed of the run was 42.91 miles an hour. In the face of this high average, gasoline consumption was 21 miles per Imperial gallon, running as high as 28 miles per Imperial gallon under favorable driving conditions and falling as low as 17 miles per Imperial gallon in hilly regions, in heavy city traffic or because of high wind resistance, poor roads or other adverse conditions. Oil consumption averaged only 1 Imperial pint for each 900 miles. Cost of maintenance during the entire run was only $1.10.

"The results of this run, together with those attained in a similar run recently in the Mojave desert in California, demonstrate conclusively not only the high standard of engineering and the high quality of material built in the Ford V-8 car, but also its economy of performance."

Why Not Arrowwood?

The hustling suburb to the West of us, Mossleigh, has a well organized board of trade and for a new town in a general way they do things that are worthwhile. About the only thing that Arrowwood does that is worthwhile is curling, which is laudable enough, but why not let us organize a board of trade and do other things that would be worth while as well as curling?

Years of service are obtained by using dependable products. The Renfrew line has a reputation that that they will risk against any other line. See us for kitchen ranges, farm truck scales, washing machines and cream separators.

There is no better recommendation for your products than a satisfied user. Pete Christensen is skimming all his profit out of the milk from his five cows. Ask for demonstration.

Renfrew washers are simple in construction, well lasting qualities, easy on clothes and the easiest hand operated machine on the market. A Renfrew
